Early in the railroad history of the State, it became apparent that the most important roads then projected, would meet near this spot. The necessity of connecting the South Atlantic sea ports with the Mississippi Valley, commanded the attention of the leading men of the South. A committee of the Legislature, in an able report, urged that this State should build a grand trunk line, from a point on the Tennessee river near Lookout Mountain, to a point near the southeastern bank of the Chattahoochee, and branches thence to her important towns, which, like veins of the human body, should lead to a common center. The widespread sentiment in favor of reaching out...
