The real estate columns constitute the bulk of classified advertising. In the light of that fact, example B is in error only in so far as it is lost in a mass of other ads of identically the same pattern. Example A may not be so explicit, but it is original in style and the reference to a fine billiard room serves as a trimming which has every advantage in the possibility of its appeal over cold dimensions. The seasoned advertising solicitor recognizes the trite copy error as a mistake of everyday occurrence with a majority of his advertisers. VIII. Business Opportunities. A B FDT?
