On one occasion, he says, He recollects being so powerfully struck with this sentiment, that he was compelled to fall down on his knees before the Father of Mercies, in devout adoration of his divine bounty; first, for having communicated to His children the love of knowledge, and for opening to their view that new world of wonders which knowledge discovers; and, secondly, for having inspired the delights of disinterested friendship, which appeared to him, at that time, the purest and highest joys which the human mind is capable of tasting. In 1766, after having completed the usual term of five years at the university, he was admitted to his first degree in arts, and his name was inserted in the first list of candidates for university honors. He was immediately appointed private tutor to several young gentlemen, and some time after received from another college very flattering and advantageous offers, which seemed to open a way to the first dignities and highest emoluments both in the university and in the church. But this offer he was obliged to decline on account of ill health. As a Latin scholar he was particularly distinguished. During the period that he was employed in the...
