The Emperor Tamarin is a monkey with a moustache (that's why it looks so much different from the usual monkeys). In fact, it's called the Emperor Tamarin because of its moustache. Emperor Wilhelm II of Germany had such a long moustache, and the monkey was named after him. Compared to other monkeys, the Emperor Tamarin is quite small. They measure about 9 to 10 inches in length (this is their head and body measurement). Their tails are long, however, and can measure anywhere from 13 to 16 inches so their tails are even longer than their bodies. Excited to learn more about the Emperor Tamarin?
