MUSICAL NOTES (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Musical Notes No biography would be complete without an account of a march to Rome taken when he was sixty for some Jubilee. He was accompanied by fifteen hundred other pilgrims, and other processions joined them on the way. They must have been a striking sight - choristers in gowns, cowled monks, surpliced priests, peasants in their picturesque Sunday best, and children as angels bearing olive branches, all singing as they marched, the music of the man who forty-four years before had trudged into Rome singing all by himself - a nobody. It would be interesting to know what Palestrina would have thought of an account of a recent pilgrimage to Assisi, the home of the blessed Saint Francis, where pilgrims were dashing into the city in motors, and each motor seemed equipped with at least two horns. In middle life Sorrow claimed Palestrina for her own. He lost his dearly loved wife and three of his four sons. All musical and carefully trained - only the worthless one left. But Palestrina's loss was the world's gain, for some of his finest work was done at this heart-breaking time. He wrote very little secular music, but Motets, Litanies, Offertories, in fact all Church Music, he just poured out. Though not classed with our modern composers, he did give a helping hand to our Modern Harmony, for it was he who took the leading part from the tenor and gave it to the Soprano, which led to more than can be mentioned here. Naturally conservative, he was fond of simple triads; was chary of the now indispensable Dominant Seventh, and of what was then called disturbing chromatic intervals....
