Undoubtedly, this is the greatest job by any author. It is actually filled with wisdom and knowledge I am quickly could get a pleasure of reading a written book.

Not illustrated. 1912 Excerpt: .of mica in lowness of power factor, by substituting silk for paper. By this means large condensers equal or nearly equal to mica might be made at considerably less expense. The very small effect of interposing mica, a material of practically infinite ohmic resistance, on the energy loss occurring in imperfect insulators is well illustrated in condensers A and C, Table IX. As I showed a few weeks ago, the heat generated in such a circuit at a high voltage is quite sufficient completely to scorch such materials as the oiled cloths commonly used as insulation. The results of the experiments on vulcanised rubber and on gutta-percha are naturally of the greatest interest, and I hope the authors will continue their experiments on commercial rubber cables, and see whether other samples not only have a minimum at a similar temperature, but also whether that minimum is generally so low as is shown in Fig. 27. In my experiments mentioned on page 388, in which I pointed out the negative temperature coefficient of the power factor of guttapercha, I made no attempt to go beyond the temperatures to which submarine cables would be exposed, and at the frequency of 50 the curves which I obtained differed but little from a straight line. Some comment on the results given in Table XXIV . for the power factor of a twin-wire gutta-percha cable, which seems to have a very different value when straight and when coiled, o-o2o. and 0045...
