

Clean Water: A Choral Dialectic for Unaccompanied Satb Choir (Paperback)

By Secretary Michael

Machinists Union Press, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This choral dialectic, titled Clean Water, is the first in a series of six. It is quite short (less than 12 minutes), acappella, SATB, and structurally unlike anything you've ever heard before. Compared to sacred music, secular choral music is limited in the variety of musical forms available. In hopes of expanding the diversity of musical formats, Secretary Michael is experimenting with different musical architectures. Among them is the choral dialectic. As the name suggests, a choral dialectic is a debate, a musical tussle between two points of view. At the end there is a resolution as the two sides reach a sort of harmony. Or maybe not. The choral dialectic uses a very different and interesting new architecture. Hopefully you'll find that these storylike works are interesting, fun to sing (SATB), fun to listen to, provide clear and rational argument, and contribute to the secular repertoire. The subject matter of Secretary Michael's works is always egalitarian in spirit. Although choral dialectics can be challenging to write, these are quite easy to sing. A favorite technique of Secretary Michael is...
