Melanie Rock. Paperback. Condition: New. 188 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.4in. He turned randomly left and right and circled a roundabout three times as if he didnt know which way he wanted to go. The green car fell back a few cars but stuck with them. He exited the roundabout when he could see that a horse and buggy was up ahead. The carriage had two tourists more interested in each other than the scenery. There was oncoming traffic but if he timed it right. . . Hold on. He pushed the accelerator to the floor hoping the car had enough power to do what he needed. The car shot forward and he shifted up a gear. Jakeyou wont get around in time. There is a car coming. Jake! I see it. Jake cut out around the horse and buggy and pulled back into his lane with inches between his right front fender and the bumper of the oncoming car. He was aware of the startled faces of the tourists as they whizzed by, the fist-shaking of the horse cabbie as well as the horns of the oncoming cars. He slowed only slightly, trying to put distance between them and the green car. Checking the rear-view mirror, Jake saw exactly what he had hoped to see. The green car was stuck behind the buggy as there was now a steady stream of oncoming traffic. He could see the passenger with his head and shoulders out of the window shouting at the cabbie. After rounding the next corner, he reduced his speed to the limit trying to blend back into the traffic. He took the next four turns at random but at the same time trying to head towards the coast. Finally, when he was sure he had lost them,...
