Perhaps the best solution is to go green with vertical landscapes. More than just a decorative trend, this is a means of bringing life and greenery into metropolitan areas by using different framing systems to create compositions of plant life and adapt them to diverse settings, including offices, factories, parking lots, hotels, and installations within larger parks. Enriched by the reflections of the inventive protagonists of this fertile new aesthetic, Going Green with Vertical Landscapes is organised by theme and canvases early experiments conducted by famous design companies like Vo Trong Nghia Architects (VTN), Fytogreen Australia and RYUICHI ASHIZAWA ARCHITECTS and associates. All of these projects combine man-made materials, recent technologies, and diverse types of vegetation to conquer the vertical dimension. Contents: Preface; Guidelines for Green Faades and Roof Gardens; Introduction; Guidelines for Going Green; Case studies. This item ships from multiple locations.
