Fewer people do homage to theories; fewer are charmed by mystery. Science has descended from the airy conjectures of hasty generalization, and seeks now the solid ground of ascertained fact. The deductive method has yielded to the inductive, with an immense gain to calm reason and assured knowledge. Religious inquiry experiences the same tendency. Dogmatism and speculation have had their day. Faith lays hold of and employs fact with an ever-increasing devotion. The church knows it; theology shows it. What is truth? The world awaits the answer, and stands ready to give allegiance to the truth. In the new spirit the modern Christian tests his creed. An heirloom may be a curiosity, but he will not use it. He builds anew. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at This book is a reproduction of an important historical work.
