Excerpt from Philosophical Magazine and Journal of Science, Vol. 6 Two of far nobler shape, erect and tall, God-like erect, with native honour crowned, In naked majesty, seemed lords of all. Paradise Lost, book iv. Of this noble and dignified structure, the portion that claims our first notice is the head, the capital that crowns the fabric. Its elevated position; its ample expansion of countenance, - the index of the operations of mind; its rounded and globular form; its comely covering of hair, hanging in the unadorned simplicity of nature, or modified by the contrivances of art; and its serving as the seat of almost all the organs of sense; are prerogatives that entitle it to our peculiar consideration.
