Excerpt from Harry s Temptation, or Christmas in Canada NE bright morning in December a knot of laughing boys were hurrying along the streets of Halifax, the chief town of Nova Scotia. V From the satchels on their backs you could see that they were on their way to school; but by the look of eager excitement in their faces, it seemed as if some keener pleasure than lessons was in prospect. Besides, they had with them a few coasters; these are long ? at pieces of wood on runners, on which boys in Canada sit or lie, whilst they slide down a frozen hill or street. The sky was deep blue, and the sun so bright that it seemed wonderful that, instead of melting the thick white snow, it only made it glitter like diamonds; and as the pleasant, crunching sound was heard under the boys feet, they knew that the frost was as hard as ever. Presently they came in sight of the signal-station, which is situated at the top of a hill in front of the artillery...
