Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Camera Craft, Vol. 3: A Photographic Monthly; May, 1901 If we lived on a planet without an atmosphere, such as our own satellite, and were suddenly carried to the earth and required to specify what, of all the wonderful things seen, most excited our interest, we would be forced, in perfect fairness, to answer the floating reservoirs - the clouds. Because we do live on a planet that has an atmosphere, and daily see the never-ending procession of aerial forms marching across the sky we are unable to rightly marvel at the clouds, though we may rightly admire the beauty of the cloud scape. We fail to realize, too, that we are living at the bottom of a sea - a sea of air and not of water. This is a deeper sea than that of the sailing ships, and soundings exceeding five miles have recently been made in it. Twilight indicates a sensible atmosphere of perhaps forty miles, and some measurements of meteoric phenomena would extend the envelope of air to one hundred miles; but for all practical purposes...

Reviews

It is an awesome publication which i actually have ever read through. it had been writtern really properly and valuable. I found out this book from my i and dad recommended this pdf to discover.

This book is definitely not simple to begin on studying but quite fun to see. I actually have read and that i am sure that i will gonna read through yet again once again in the foreseeable future. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
