Snubnose. Paperback. Condition: New. 152 pages. Dimensions: 7.9in. x 5.2in. x 0.6in. MOONDOVER OVER THE MEKONG: stories of guns, gambling, girls and general mayhem that redraw the borders of crime. This globe-spanning collection rockets you from dirt-road trailer parks to the slums of Bangkok, the gangster underbelly of Tokyo to a postapocalyptic Old West. There's girls on the run from Russian mobsters in the sex capital of Asia while a retiring crank cookers ill-gotten fortune goes up for grabs on a Wyoming backroad. And a whole lot of territory in between. These ain't your typical crime stories. PRAISE: Spanning the slums from Thailand to Wyoming, Moondog embraces the plight of the downtrodden as it exposes an underworld seldom seen. These are the stories of the beaten-down and betrayed who have been pushed to the brink, the street urchins and mob underlings who claw and scrape and fight like hell when presented with a way out; and Merrigan captures these liminal moments with blinding lucidity, and in the process pulls off the nearly impossible: extracting hope from what was once hopeless. -- Joe Clifford, author of Choice Cuts and Wake the Undertaker A dagger in the guts and a jaunt through the back alleys of Southeast Asia. Where else can you get both for 2.99 -- Jake Needham, author of KILLING PLATO and other best-selling Asian crime novels The thing that stands out to me about Merrigan's writing is the way he absolutely nails the humanity of each story. Whether talking about American meth dealers or Asian gangsters or Old West outlaws, Merrigan is able to zero in on the essence of his characters with laser-like accuracy, bringing each to life in a way that's both vivid in its detail and mundane in its capturing of everyday life, no matter where...
