SYNTHESIS & STRUCTURAL CHARACTERISATION

Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | of Multi Walled Carbonnano Tube Dopped Barium Titanate Ceramics for Capacitor Application | As the miniaturization with increasing functionalities and acceleration of the clock speed of electronic devices continues, the desired characteristics and processability of the starting powder become a subject of in-depth investigations. One is in the property of the starting powder and the other is in processing of the powder for producing (Multi layered ceramic capacitors) MLCCs. The second interest is the crystal phase of the BaTiO₃ particles at room temperature with the size in the range of nanometre. The third issue is the impurities incorporated in the BaTiO₃ crystal lattice. These issues are considered to meet the demands by modifying BaTiO₃ for current and future capacitor applications. The mechanically milled BaCO₃ particles accelerated the diffusion process and decreased the calcinations temperature. We have carried out a detailed investigations over the addition of multi walled carbon nanotubes (MWCNTs) on the properties & structure of BaTiO₃ based ceramics prepared using solid state reaction route. The properties of pure and doped materials investigated have been correlated to explore doped BaTiO₃ for technological applications. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 64 pp.
