When you're fourteen and life has been nothing but hurt and disappointment, Raya decides it's time to strike out on her own. She leaves the boring village and what she's determined will be her last foster placement, for the excitement of London. But it turns out she's a witch, with the annoying habit of time-travelling -- by accident. And a sarcastic witch's cat Oscar tags along for the ride. Why would she fling herself into the midst of the Essex Witch Trials in 1645 England? After being arrested by one of history's most notorious witch hunters, her social worker and witch mentor Bryony goes back to try to save them from the gallows. But returning to present-day London remains out of reach when they find themselves in 1645 Istanbul/Constantinople. There, life is more amazing than she ever dreamed. Can she stay? And at what cost?
