Excerpt from The Oberlin Alumni Magazine, Vol. 6: March 1910 But warm sentiment must face cold facts, sometimes. Even death may mean life. When a mere boy of twelve I attended the funeral services of a Congregational church over which my grand father had been pastor for sixty-four years. (at that time the long est continuous pastorate in the United States). That little country church had fulfilled its mission. At that last service the Rev. T. G. Colton gave consolation to the few remaining members of the church by speaking of the law of change needed in leading to a larger life. The circumstances and that sermon made a deep impression upon me. From that day to this I have been led to view any inevitable change as a possible opening of a larger opportunity.
