THE LICENSING ACT OF OF 1904: WITH NOTES AND EXPLANATIONS (CLASSIC REPRINT)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Licensing Act of of 1904: With Notes and Explanations For the first time in British history a trade has been called upon to pay for the recompense of its members whose businesses are to be taken away, for, presumably, the public good, and the axiom that public benefits should be paid for by the public disappears. Before considering the Bill in its practical aspects upon the Trade, we will quote some public statements by leaders of men, as showing what their intentions, at least, were. The Lord Chancellor On The Bill. The Lord Chancellor, having remarked that a question of this kind should be considered independently of party, said that a noble earl who had just spoken seemed to assume that the question of temperance was always dealt with on one side only. The noble earl, by way of showing that this Bill ought to be rejected, had given them statistics of drunkenness, and had spoken of the property of brewers as being enormous. The Lord Chancellor said he could not help thinking that there was gross exaggeration about this. They were dealing with forty millions of people, and their drink bill naturally came to a large sum of money. But if they had a drink Bill why not a food Bill? The noble earl spoke of the excessive number of public-houses in every part of the country, and he could hardly find words to speak with sufficient severity of those who created them. Did the noble earl think they grew automatically? He knows as well as I do, continued the Lord Chancellor, that not one of these licences could be in existence except...
