Excerpt from A Farewell Sermon, Delivered in the Churches of the Perth Mission, Canada West, by the Rev. Alexander Pyne, A. B., Rector, on His Return to England: July 5, 1857 But again, not only must this counsel be frequently declared - it must also be plainly and fully set forth. God has in mercy made his counsel plain, therefore his faithful ambassadors must follow his example. We should never forget that the counsel of God borrows nothing from the wisdom of man, and hence it was that our blessed Lord did not select his first ambassadors from the wise and learned of the Jewish nation He did not send to Corinth, Rome, or Athens, in the hope of finding out some wise philosophers, who might be willing to add the flourish of oratory to the simplicity of the message. No He knew that His Gospel would speak for itself that there was a power in its simplicity which the grandeur of man could not add to, and therefore he passed by the great and learned of...

Reviews

This book is definitely worth acquiring. I have gone through and so I am certain that I will likely read through again in the future. It's been printed in an exceptionally basic way in fact it is only after I finished reading this publication in which it actually altered me, change the way in my opinion.
