They menace our streets, breaking into our homes, stealing our cars, and kidnapping our families. Aggressive and well-organized, armed thugs blanket their turf with fear, line their pockets with drug money, and savagely visit retribution on anyone who resists. Criminals Under Color of Authority: When cops kick down the wrong door, plant evidence, and sometimes kill in their zeal to fill prisons with nonviolent offenders, and how the media rushes to apologize for it. Prisoners of War: A meditation on the mercilessness of consigning anyone to a cell. Includes an extended analysis of the revolutionary Stanford Prison Experiment. A Matter of Semantics: The language of prohibition is charged with mindless prejudice, assigning moral values to substances based on who uses them, rather than what they do. Improbable Cause: A history and legal critique on the many many ways the Fourth Amendment no longer applies to most of us. Freedom is Slavery: The deceptive linguistics and practices of the Criminal Justice system, including the ethical crises of civil forfeiture, private prisons, and exploitative inmate labor. Rhymes...
