Excerpt: . the night, the moon arose and grew, From off the sea a little west-wind blew, Rustling the garden-leaves like sudden rain; And ere the moon had gun to fall again The wind grew cold, a change was in the sky, And in deep silence did the dawn draw nigh. Behold, another eve I bid you see! The sun is setting in the west, the sky is clear and hard, and no clouds come anigh The golden orb, but further off they lie Steel-grey and black, with edges red as blood, And underneath them is the weltering flood Of some huge sea, whose tumbling hills, as they Turn restless sides about, are black or grey, Or green, or glittering with the golden flame; The wind has fallen now, but still the same The mighty army moves, as if to drown This lone, bare rock,...

Reviews

This publication is amazing. It is definitely basic but shocks in the fifty percent of your publication. You wont feel monotony at anytime of your own time (that's what catalogues are for concerning if you question me).
