CHAPTER rV. : A pious and painful preacher. --Fullnr. Mr Lyon lived in a small house, not quite so good as the: parish clerks, adjoining the entry which led to the Chapel Yard. The new prosperity of Dissent at Treby had led to an, enlargement of the chapel, which absorbed all extra. funds and left none for the enlargement of. the ministers income. He eat this morning, as usual, in a low upstairs room, called his study, which, by means of a closet capable of holding his bed, served also as a sleeping-room. The book-shelves did not suffice for his store of old books, which lay about in piles so arranged as to leave narrow lanes between them; for the minister was much given to walking about during his hours of meditation, and very narrow passages would serve for his small logs, unencumbered by any other drapery than his black silk stockings and the flexible, though prominent, , bows of black ribbon that tied his knee breeches. He was walking about now, with his hands clasped behind him, an attitude in which his body seemed to bear about the same proportion to his head as the lower part of a stone Hermes bears to the carved image that crowns it. His face looked old and worn, yet the curtain of hair that fell from his bald crown and hung about his neck retained much of its original auburn tint, and his large, brown,...
