The best position for a board is, in most boats, with the center of its immersed portion a little forward of the center of lateral resistance of the hull and the center of effort of the sails; but in a canoe, in order to obtain room for sitting and sleeping, the board must be considerably forward of this if a trunk is required for it, and it may be moved forward without much harm, provided the aftersail is reduced in consequence. The only detriment to this plan would be that while the boat would balance properly on a wind with the board down, she would need a larger mizzen when in shoal water with board up. To avoid this disadvantage two plans are adopted, either to place the board well forward and add a second board aft, or to use a folding board that will not require a large trunk, and may be placed in any part of the boat. Of the latter class of boards there are several varieties, all of them patented. The question of weight in a centerboard is also an important one. Most sailing canoes require some ballast, and in this form it can be carried lower than in any other way, as a drop of 18in. below the keel is allowed by the rules. The weight being so low down will make the boat much stiffer than inside ballast can, and its value will be found when...
