HALI: LIFE and POEMS Translation and Introduction by Paul Smith Hali (1837-1914) has a special place in Urdu Sufi literature. He was poet, critic, teacher, reformer and prose-writer. He had no formal education yet he acquired through his own efforts Urdu, Persian and Arabic and a good knowledge of English. As a poet he did not confine himself to the ghazal, but successfully composed in the form of the nazm, rubai and marsie or elegy. His poetic abilities were used to high aims of social and moral education. He wrote biographies of Ghalib and Sadi of Shiraz and others. His interests were wide-ranging, his literary abilities commensurate with his humanitarian aims. In his poetry and prose he preferred a simple, natural style, that made him accessible to all at the time and now. This is a translation of 87 of his rubais and it has the correct rhyme structure of the originals. Introduction on his Life and Times and Poetry and the rubai. Selected Bibliography. 117 pages.
