iUniverse, United States, 2005. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . When a teenage girl finds herself at the brink of insanity she takes the plunge into what she believes is the answer to her loneliness and boredom. This South London girl, brought up within the confines of a run down council estate with an alcoholic mother, discovers the pleasures of freedom in more than one way when she arrives in Paris. In the world's most romantic city her dreams are fed with enticing flavors as she seeks to create these into the real world. Searching for her heart's dream man, she meets Michel, the manager of the bookshop where she is given employment. When they fall in love Mary envisions all her dreams will come true, holding on strong to this belief like she has been hypnotically entranced. After two years Michel starts the job he has always wanted giving Mary hope that the dream she has been waiting for will now arrive. Soon to see the truth to this belief Mary accepts the invitation of Sebastian, a persistent businessman, only to discover a world even less attractive than the one she left in London. Through out this girl's confrontational experiences, hope encourages her to continue searching for the answers to make her dreams real. With a decision to find what no amount of money can buy, Mary takes a one-way flight to Bangkok where her expedition for the truth begins. Discover what Mary finds in this multi-dimensional story as she questions everything life is made of. Come, let me show you a world you don't know, we can get there when you feel within, deep and slow.
