April 30th. --I took a beautifully marked variety of the March Crosswing (AnUopteryx tescularia), an insect generally taken at the end of February. At 12. 30 p. m. my wife called my attention to a Pond-skater (Hydrometra lacustris) skimming about in a fountain basin in our garden, and as we had only filled it with water the previous day we concluded that this insect had flown from the Basingstoke Canal, which lies some 300 yards to our north-west, the wind blowing from that direction.
