For instance, many of Rowland s superb gratings have as many as 40,000 lines, and the spectra of the 3rd and 4th order may be advantageously used. Professor Michelson has designed a new form of grating with what is the equivalent of 20 rulings, and it appears that he uses spectra of about the 15,000th or 20,000th order. He is using the instrument in the investigation of the Zeeman effect, a research in which a very high dispersion and resolving power are desirable. The use of such high orders of spectra is only possible when the problem of concentrating the light in a single spectrum has been solved. Printing of Maps and Tables of Spectra.--In 1896 the Editorial Board of the Astrophysxcal Journal announced that they intended as far as possible to adopt (i) Rowland s wave lengths, (2) the printing of spectra with red to right, (3) the printing of tables of wave lengths with short waves at the top, (4) the kilometer per second as the unit of velocity in the line of sight in astrophysical work. The difficulty of consistently adhering to rules of this kind is well exemplified by the fact that the first map of a spectrum published in the journal after this announcement was made was printed with the red to left. The Board, finding that many spectroscopists did not favour their resolutions entirely, invited further explicit opinions. It then appeared that there was general agreement as...
