Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .alcohol and then treated by the Twitchell method for rosin. In v/orcking this method on samples of known rosin contents, the following results were found: It was necessary to make a slight correction for acidity in a pure oil run through by this method. Further work may show a way to make this allowance unnecessary. Correction in this set of samples, 0.59 per cent. Apply this method to the boiled oils. If any modification of the method as outlined occurs to you, report it with your results. Tables I and II give the constants of raw and boiled linseed oil, respectively, as reported by the various analysts. A study of these figures furnishes much interesting and valuable material. Storing raw linseed oil in sealed containers for a period of five years has made no appreciable change in any of the original figures save that of the acid number, which is higher. Oil from 1913 crop North American seed possesses constants practically the same as oil from other crops which the committee has reported. This shows uniformity of oil produced year by year in the same locality. The iodine number of the fresh fatty acids from a linseed oil averages on the six raw oils 3.1 per cent higher than the same figure on the oil. The greatest difference is 3.73 per cent, while e lowest is 2.13 per cent. It is valuable to know the limits r the iodine number on the fatty acids because often...
