Excerpt from The Common School Controversy: Consisting of Three Letters of the Secretary of the Board of Education, of the State of Massachusetts, in Reply to Charges Preferred Against the Board The Hon. Secretary, in his last report to the Legislature, furnishes a practical commentary upon such a use of the Bible in our schools as this system allows. In the examination of a school at Edinburgh, in Scotland, he found the boys perfectly acquainted with the text of the four Gospels, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, so that they could turn to any passage selected at random, in less time than it could be recited by the examiner, and yet utterly ignorant on points of common morals, as controlled by the Bible. To the interesting narrative of that examination, the Hon. Secretary subjoins, The children had been admirably trained in most respects, but their minds seemed not to have been turned in this direction. The agreement between the system of Mr. Girard and that which is in action here, as implicated by our correspondent, lies in their both excluding Christianity as an essential element of education, in the training of children, leaving that to be procured when, and how it may. Now the Puritans, who founded the Common School system, had no such design. The aim of our law (now) is, says the Secretary's report, to secure as much of religious instruction as is compatible with religious freedom and what that is, in the esteem of those in authority, may be inferred from what has been said of the manner in which books are prepared for the reading of our children. On...
