Excerpt from Memorial Service in Honor of Our Dearly Beloved and Much Lamented President William McKinley: Held on September Nineteenth, 1901 at Temple Beth-El, Fifth Avenue and 76th Street, New York City The crown of our head hath fallen; woe unto us for we have sinned. Thou, O Lord, remainest forever, Thy throne from generation to generation. These words voice for us the full message which this sorrow-laden hour is to speak to us. They are the cry of a heart rent with grief, but also the assertion of an immovable trust in the future. They are wrung from the Prophet of old as he sat weeping over the ruins of Zion. His manly soul was convulsed with sobs as he beheld the pride of his people fallen and trampled in the dust. His sublime faith was strong enough to master his grief and see in the everlasting ness of God whose throne is established on righteousness and judgment, the eventual salvation and renewal of the glories of this nation. Thus the Republic, speaking out of the depths of one national heart with unanimity of mind and speech first gives vent to the great woe which has bowed the nation, but in the very midst of its sorrow and humiliation it becomes conscious of its strength. Our coming together to-day in response to the President s proclamation, show us the relation in which government stands to religion. Government does not com mand it nor prescribe it; it neither fosters nor promotes it. But it relies for its own strength, stability and sanctity upon men s...
