Excerpt from Report of the Superintending School Committee of Fitzwilliam: For the Year Ending March 11th, 1845 The Superintending School Committee for the year ending March 11th, 1845, submit the following annual Report. Believing that very much depends on an efficient superintendence of schools, we have endeavored, as far as possible, to acquaint ourselves with the best modes of managing and teaching, that we might be able to recommend such improvements, as in our judgment the wants of schools seemed to require. We have at all times, by suggestions and appeals to the higher sentiments of parents, teachers, scholars, and prudential committees, used our best efforts to impress upon each and all the importance of a well disciplined, thorough, and efficient common school. The duties, to us, have been pleasant and agreeable; and, as far as it depended upon us, we have aimed to render the laborious task so to the teachers; and we have been gratified to think that our various suggestions have been well received, particularly by the teachers. But few if any considered themselves above receiving instruction and advice. Examination of Teachers. The first official duty which we were called upon to perform, was the examination of teachers for the summer schools, on the 11th of May. Ten of the thirteen employed in summer, promptly presented themselves on the day appointed, - all of whom we approbated. The remaining three living at a distance, and not commencing school at the time, were not present, - three only of the prudential committees were present.
