The National Bank Note Co. lows: Imparting a co-existing movement to two reciprocating catch-pieces, in the operation of the trip cut-ofvalves. Nelson, J. The claim is, in terms, for an effect, or function, and is, therefore, not patentable. But, without placing the case upon this strict ground, the unanswerable objection to the plaintiffs recovery is, that the improvement is substantially described and claimed in a patent granted to him on the 19th of October, 1844. This is a bar to the subsequent patent. Another difficulty in the case is, that the patentee admits that he invented the improvement early in 1844. It was not embodied in the original patent of 1845, or noticed therein, until the reissue of February 21st, 1860, more than fourteen years after the invention. We think that the defendant is entitled to judgment. Toppan, Caepenter and Co. vs. The National Bank Note Co. And Others. In Equity. An inventor, by permitting a public use of his invention for more than two years before ho applies for a patent for it, forfeits all right to a patent, under section 7 of the Act of March 3d, 1839, (5 U. 8. Stat, at Large, 354.) To obtain a provisional injunction on a patent, the title of the patentee must bo strengthened by exclusive possession for some period of time, or by an adjudication sustaining the validity of the patent. Such possession must be one as against the public, and, therefore,...
