CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 84 pages. Dimensions: 10.0in. x 8.0in. x 0.2in. My name is Frank Williams. I am a retired law enforcement officer and instructor in Self-Defense with over 40 years of training. We wrote this book with the intent to show what can and will often times happen in a fight or when physical training is used to stop or immobilize and attacker. My name is Steven Snodgrass. I am a former Chief of Surgery and also a martial artist, (Third-degree Black Belt). I have a great deal of passion in regards to both subjects, as they are intimately intertwined. One is constructive, the other, destructive; hence the fascination. This is why the book was written. This book does not in any way condone physical violence, but please let me assure you; no one wants to be a victim. We will demonstrate that point in a never-before-seen manner. This book, THE EQUATION, is part of a multi-book series because there is a great deal of material to cover. It is co-authored with my instructor, Sensei Frank Williams, As well as being a surgeon, I have been a student of the martial arts since 1989. This book deals with describing some of the most common self-defense techniques used on the street to protect a person from serious injury or death. The content provides details of how these techniques are administered, but it also demonstrates the psychological and physical effects these injuries may produce to the human body. From my surgical experience, vivid details are described in what takes place during and after the injury. This includes the initial physical examination, diagnostic tests, and what a person can expect who suffers such an injury. Where applicable, pre, intra and post-operative care is...
