Whether we sulphur with 0.147 or with 0.243 per cent of sulphur dioxide, the sulphur dioxide i-n the clarified juice is the same, if we only lime back to the same acidity (0.109 and 0.108; 0.078 and 0.076; 0.051 and 0.059). The results also explain where the remainder of the sulphur goes. It is found in the precipitate. If we add up the SO₂ in the clarified juice to that in the precipitate we come very close to the total amount used in sulphitation; the rest has been lost by oxidation to sulphuric acid. The experiments furthermore confirm the results found before, that the clarified juice contains the more sulphur, the more acid we leave the juice after liming. The nearer we come to neutrality, the less sulphur we find in the clarified juice, and with neutrality itself we reach the minimum. Therefore, if we want to leave a minimum quantity of sulphur dioxide in our products, we have to lime our juices to as near neutrality as possible. The minimum quantity of sulphur that we can expect in the freshly treated clarified juice is, under these circumstances, about 0.055 per cent. If we use a quantity of sulphur which gives us just this amount of sulphur dioxide in the clarified juice, then practically no sulphur will be precipitated, even if we lime to neutrality. A...
