

Bluff

By Anjum Hoda

Oneworld Publications. Paperback. Condition: New. 336 pages. The financial crisis of 2008 was caused by greedy, unscrupulous bankers. Luckily, the Bank of England and the US Federal Reserve were our firefighters. These central banks rescued us from the brink of collapse and resuscitated our economies. Except that isn't the whole story. A simplistic narrative, it glosses over one inconvenient truth it was the firefighters who started the fire. Experienced asset management adviser Anjum Hoda contends that our central banks have been playing a deceitful game for decades. They've been using interest rates to stimulate the value of assets so that we would feel better off and spend more, thereby generating growth in the real economy. But the supply of cheap money through manipulation of interest rates creates instability not growth, because real-world salaries fail to keep pace. Highly arresting and sobering, Bluff has significant implications for the decisions we make about our own finances and even our mid- to long-term life strategies. Hoda's thesis is set out with clarity and power, and her prediction is this without radical systematic change only greater crises lie ahead. This item ships from multiple locations. Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

This publication is amazing. It is definitely basic but shocks in the fifty percent of your publication. You won't feel monotony at anytime of your own time (that's what catalogues are for concerning if you question me).
