Excerpt from The Stone Crosses of the County of Northampton It is true that here there are not numbers of pre historic crosses, similar to those sown broadcast over Cornwall; mighty monoliths, similar to those found at Stonehenge or the smaller ones in Anglesea, Orkney, and other places or magnificent market crosses, similar to those found in many of the southern counties of England. Still, the remains of some forty churchyard, ten market, twenty village, four wayside, and five memorial crosses, with sundry boundary stones, make a total by no means insignificant. Amongst these stones are many fragments of Saxon churchyard crosses, and the interlacing patterns of the ornamentation of several of these are very interesting and uncommon, the representation of the Crucifixion at Nassington being especially worthy of notice. The cross at Cogenhoe is a beautiful and, as far as this county is concerned, a unique piece of work. Several of the later crosses, particularly those in the churchyardsxii preface.
