Both sexes should be taught the proper treatment of common accidents, burns, scalds, clothes taking fire, cuts, bruises, drowning. Good reading-books will supply the necessary materials for lessons on all these subjects. But each teacher would do well to draw up some graduated scheme of instruction, so as to secure the utmost possible advantages to all his scholars, and to induce parents to prolong their children s stay at school, in the assurance that the time there spent will have been time well spent, even for the mere purpose of money-earning in after life. CHAPTER VI. NEEDLEWORK. Needlework should occupy the first hour of afternoon school. Out of five hours one should be devoted to knitting. Special pains should be taken to see that every girl has clean hands, and that no time be wasted either in setting to work or afterwards. The hints given on class management must be strictly followed, for bad discipline is not less fatal to progress in this than in other lessons. Children s intelligence should be developed by questions on the reasons for using different stitches and materials for different garments. Reading aloud during needlework is not desirable, as the teachers will be constantly giving instructions on some portion or other of the work, and the time allotted to the subject in school hours is too short to admit of anything likely to divert attention. Oral lessons on needlework should be given in the same manner as...
