Are these solutions correct? 3. In the first number of the Mathematical Visitor, I proposed the following problem: -- The first of two casks contains a gallons of wine, and the second b gallons of water; part of the water is poured into the first cask, and then part of the mixture is poured back into the second; find the probability that not more than one--th of the contents of the second cask is wine. Mr. Henry Heaton solved this problem in substance as follows: -- Let x = number of gallons of water poured into the first cask, and y = number of gallons of the mixture poured back into the second. Then y must not exceed i , the probability of which is----or (n-l)a-x a + x, and the probability required is 1 (--1)--4 l0 / (--D- b an-l)a-b According to Mr. Woolhouse s first formula in the Reprint, whichT ? says, is universally applicable, the solution would be rb fb j.-/, f6 In answer to the request, Mr. Tebay remarked that he has still some recollection of the principle which guided him in the solution of his plank problem more than twenty years ago. After obtaining the chances quoted by Mt.martin, he observed that the probabilities that the points of division fell where they were assumed to fall, were--and--; and these four being a a independent, the probability of their concurrence was of course y--x x...
