John G.Watmough is a native of Philadelphia: at an early age, he exhibited the most enthusiastic devotion to liberty. Before he had attained his eighteenth year, the second war of our Independence had commenced; the conquest of the Guerriere had already excited the wildest enthusiasm in every breast; it fired the imagination of our youthful fellow-townsmen, and he resolved at once to devote his life to the sacred cause of his country. He therefore left his home, abandoned the pleasures and comforts of domestic life, and hastened to the field. He had early applied to the venerable Madison for a commission in the regular army; and in the meanwhile, that no occasion of honour or usefulness might be lost, he joined a detachment of volunteers then raising for the defence of the Delaware, and with them performed a tour of duty in camp, under the command of the late Colonel Rush. At the end of three months, this fine battalion received orders to return home, the government having at that time no further occasion for its services, and young Watmough received a commission as a lieutenant in the second regiment, United States Artillery. He was immediately attached to a company commanded by Captain Alexander J.Williams. The first wish of his heart was now gratified, and he prepared accordingly to join the American Army on the northern Frontier. The prospects of the country were gloomy; our gallant armies had been beaten back; our strongest frontier post, Niagara, had been wrested from us; and...
