Homefront Horrors: Frights Away From the Front Lines, 1914-1918 (Paperback)

By Jess Nevins

Dover Publications Inc., United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The anxiety and dread of wartime Britain is recaptured in this anthology of horror stories and supernatural fiction dating from 1914 - 18. Rather than taking war as their theme, the tales offer readers escapist fare populated by ghosts, ghouls, and other malevolent spirits. Written amid the golden age of horror fiction -- the decades between the turn of the twentieth century and 1940, when tales of terror and the weird flourished -- these stories constitute forgotten gems by neglected masters. Seventeen tales include Max Beerbohm s Enoch Soames, in which an obscure poet makes a deal with the devil and travels forward in time to discover history s verdict of his work; Laura, by Saki, a witty and moving perspective on death and loss that recounts a dead woman s reincarnation as an animal that plagues her friends; The Three Sisters, by W. W. Jacobs, author of The Monkey s Paw, involving a plot to expedite an inheritance by simulating a ghostly visitation; The Pavilion, by E. Nesbit, in which a pair of romantic rivals challenge each other to spend the night at a...
