Forgotten Books, United States, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from King's College: Now Columbia University, 1754-1897 On June 3, 1755, was adopted the device for the seal of King's College, which continues to be that of Columbia University, with only the necessary alteration of name. The college is represented by a lady sitting on a throne of state, with several children at her knees to represent the pupils, and a reference to First Peter, indicating the spirit in which they should seek for true Wisdom. She holds open a book, the Living Oracles, and from her mouth proceed the words in Hebrew, God is my light. At her feet is the motto, IN lumine tuo videbimus lumen. In anticipation of the granting of the charter, the friends of the college had secured the services of the Rev. Dr. Samuel Johnson, of Stratford, as president. They were singularly fortunate in their choice, as he was a man of broad and sound scholarship and of remarkably liberal and advanced views. He had been much sought after by other institutions of learning, and had resisted the earnest solicitations of...

Reviews

This book is definitely not straightforward to get started on studying but extremely exciting to read. It is really simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the ebook. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.
