Houghton Mifflin, New York, 1998. Hard Cover in Dust Jacket. Condition: New. Dust Jacket Condition: New. First Edition. 1998 FIRST EDITION Hardcover book in Dustjacket . BRAND NEW from 1998 publisher . Never opened , Never owned, Never marked . Excellent Gift Giving quality . Jacket protected in New non-stick clear mylar sleeve . 5-1/2 x 8-1/2 " size; 307 pages . In this book Lisa Michaels offers a strikingly textured portrait of her days of communes and road trips, of antiwar protests and rallies - and of what came after, for her parents and for herself - as the radicalism of the 1960s and '70s gave way to conservative times . As a young child, Lisa visited her father in prison, where he was serving a two-year sentence for his part in an antiwar protest . In the early '70s, she toured the country with her mother and step-father in a customized mail truck, complete with Oriental rugs and a wood stove, until the family settled in a small northern California town . Her father later moved to the Bay Area, where he worked in auto plants and served as a labour organizer . By the age of eight Lisa was a veteran leaflet-folder, and she consecrated her father's second marriage in a Berkeley park by reading from Quotations from Chairman Mao . Not surprisingly, Lisa grew up craving conformity - giving her mother makeovers and arranging their secondhand furniture in inspired ways - but she also came to share many of the values her parents held dear: independence, frankness, and unsparing self-examination . In the buttoned-up world of UCLA during the Reagan years, she went through a hippie revival phase, wearing batik dresses and Chairman Mao pins, a throwback amid the campus's Greek revivalists and young Republicans
