Createspace, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Frederick G. Kilgour was one of the 20th century s most illuminating and influential librarians. He changed librarianship by starting OCLC, Inc. and by creating the WorldCat bibliographic database, now the world s largest. In seven of his last eight published, scholarly works, Kilgour reported on experiments he and his co-authors conducted that discovered a way to further reduce cataloging costs by setting up a simple discovery system for known-item searches. This book examines Kilgour s last eight papers in the context of his contributions as a librarian and within the framework of contemporary information discovery systems.
