Excerpt from Rambles on the Golden Coast of the South Island of New Zealand The Nineteenth Century is an Age of Travel. Every accessible point of interest and coigne of vantage on the universal globe is becoming, year by year, a scene of pilgrimage for increasing bands of tourists. Journeyings and wanderings to and fro, which, to the past generation, would have seemed daring deeds and enterprises of great pith and moment, are in these days of progression deemed but ordinary occurrences. Given but the means, the way is clear to the tourist, even to the nethermost parts of the earth. New Zealand, the Britain of the South, admittedly presents a diversity of scenery, unsurpassed in its variety, magnificence, and grandeur, by any other part of the world. It is, in sooth, a land of picturesque wonders, wherein the admirer of the sublime may look from Nature up to Natures God in never-ceasing awe and admiration. Foremost in its wide and long continuing stretch of panoramic beauty, forest and glade, and hill and dale, mountains overtopping mountains, Ossa piled upon Pilion, woodland, lakes,...
