Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .conception of the State, and made its practice efficacious, whatever may now be thought of its theory. It would perhaps had been well if Mr. Ki: ig hail grappled with the issue between this point of view and the utilitarian; it would have given fibre to this part of the book, which at present is, and was seemingly meant to be, dogmatic. Mazzini s conception of nationality is of value just at present. The honour of a country depends more on removing its faults than on boasting of its qualities. Patriotism is intense regard for a country s moral greatness. Nationality depended on this sentiment, but it implied a regard for the international division of labour, and a recognition of special aptitudes and special missions on every hand. The European Federation which was to stand upon this basis, and toward which the regeneration of Italy was one step, is distant enough. THE Schoolmasters Yearbook And Directory For 1903. (Sonnenschein.) This is the first issue of a work whose usefulness is obvious to anyone who turns its pages. The only matter for surprise is that it did not exist long ago. The first part includes an account of the chief Societies and Organisations connected with the profession, of the Hoard of Education, the Universities and Colleges, the Courses of Training, Diplomas and Certificates in Education, and a review of the past year in its Educational relations. The last item is, of course, chiefly the Hill. Mr. Balfour...
