With my own hands have I buried my dear friend beneath the yellowing limes. Shall I meet his spirit again Ah! who can solve that problem The death of Fido was the first break in the happiness of the little circle of friends at the Cottage. It was something more than the loss of a dog; it was the loss of a friend--a friend who had been an hourly companion--for the dogs were completely a part of the life at the Cottage. The next letter is to Miss Louisa C. Quiz was a dog belonging to Miss L. C. s sister, and was destroyed in consequence of disease. October, 1874. S. Dionysius, 8fc. Louisa...
