

Microbial Fuel Cell

By Frederic P. Miller

Alphascript Publishing Dez 2009, 2009. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - A microbial fuel cell (MFC) or biological fuel cell is a bio-electrochemical system that drives a current by mimicking bacterial interactions found in nature. Mediator-less MFCs are a much more recent development and due to this the factors that affect optimum operation, such as the bacteria used in the system, the type of ion membrane, and the system conditions such as temperature, are not particularly well understood. Bacteria in mediator-less MFCs typically have electrochemically-active redox enzymes such as cytochromes on their outer membrane that can transfer electrons to external materials (Min, et al., 2005). 100 pp. Englisch.
