Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Completion of Two Centuries: A Discourse Preached in Fairfield on Thanksgiving Day, November 28, 1839 We will not hide them from their children, showing to the generation to come the praises of the Lord, and his strength, and His wonderful works that he hath done. In this passage and the context the Psalmist announces his purpose to narrate the dealings of God with his people, in the varied vicissitudes through which they had been borne by his wonder working providence and grace. He thus indicates the importance of not hiding, or of rescuing from concealment and oblivion the important events in the past history of a people, that they may stand forth as beacons for the guidance of present and future generations. He says, I will utter dark sayings of old, which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us, * * * that the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born, who should arise and declare them to their children; that they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments. The wonderful works of God adverted to in the text, he proceeds to narrate in the subsequent part of the Psalm. They consist of his marvellous allotments to his ancient covenant people, appearing in alternate calamitous judgments and gracious deliverances, as it became needful, to abase their pride, scourge their lusts, and punish their unbelief, or to recover them from despair, awaken gratitude, and rekindle faith in the goodness and veracity of a covenant God. The deliverance out of the land of Egypt and the house of bondage, the forty years...
