Guarded, by these difficulties, against the perils of inquiry and detection, the authors of these frauds have hardened in confidence, cool determination and impudence. After an election, the defeated partisans soon forget the inquiry into causes; and it is impossible to arouse them to the painful labor of searching for the mode and means of their own irretrievable loss. The fruitless contest once fully past, disappointment vents itself in vain curses; and wrath soon evaporates in threats as idle as the wind. The combination of force, kept up in hope of success, vanishes in defeat; and the recently associated agents of the defeated party meet again only as strangers, until a new movement inspires new hope, in another contest - while the victorious leaders of faction divide the spoils, with a security which can tolerate no feeling towards their baffled foes but indifference or contempt. The great and manifold difficulties thus shown, as besetting such an investigation, have, in this instance, been met by the possession of the means and qualifications enumerated, to an extent which can be better demonstrated by the results attained, than by preliminary statements, which might seem prematurely boastful or egotistical. It is enough now to say, that the unremitting labor of many months has been given to this task, in total exclusion of all other interests and occupations; and the facts are therefore presented, from the outset, with a confidence in the...
