Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | Growth Studies of Major Carps in Poultry Droppings Fertilized Ponds Supplemented with Corn Gluten | Aquaculture is vital for the national economy, in terms of nutrition, employment, recreation and foreign exchange earning. Developing countries of the world especially Pakistan is facing an acute shortage of protein of high biological value which necessitates the urge to increase proteins of animal origin. Fish culture is considered as one of the most promising sources of animal protein for the future. So, there is need to increase fish production from inland waters in order to alleviate the problems of malnutrition and poverty. Fish is an important source of high quality proteins. Fish flesh contains all essential amino acids such as lysine and this serve as an efficient supplement to low protein, high carbohydrate diets of developing nations in Asia. Supplemental feeds made from locally available materials can enhance fish production. Rice polish and corn gluten are the two commonly used diets in fish farming. Corn gluten meal is potentially an inexpensive ingredient and important source of protein, energy and minerals also. Feeds containing corn gluten meal are known to enhance growth in fish. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 92 pp.
